SOLDIERS EXECUTED

Three Russian Soldiers Secretly and Summarily Executed in the Petropavlovsk Fortress.

Special to the Herald.

London, March 11.—A dispatch from St. Petersburg says three soldiers, belonging to one of the cavalry regiments of the Russian Guards, were recently secretly and summarily executed in the Petropavlovsk fortress. Deep mystery surrounds the affair, which has caused the more speculation in view of the wild rumors current within the past few weeks of conspiracies against the imperial household.

The three men were suddenly placed under arrest, a somewhat vague charge of "furthering the revolutionary propaganda" being brought against them. There was no trial, but two hours later there arrived a messenger from Czarokoe-Selo bearing a triple death sentence. It is considered significant that the document should come, not from the war minister, as under ordinary circumstances, but from the czar himself.

The doomed men were at once removed from the barracks to the fortress. The officer in charge stated that the czar had granted them a last favor—the privilege of being shot instead of meeting death on the gallows. One of the men stammered a word of thanks. His companions remained silent, and in another moment the sentences had been carried out.

Saturday matinee, commencing next Thursday, March 12th, in the funniest of all musical plays, "Jakey, Mikey and Ikey," "A New York Girl," and "The Jolly Widow."

The company numbers twenty-five people, headed with that clever character actor, Allen Curtis, and he is surrounded with such a well known cast of musical comedy players that they scarcely need an introduction to show patrons. The Beauty Chorus of this company, from reports, is the best picked lot of singers and dancers that have been seen together for some time.

The show "Jakey, Mikey and Ikey" is light at plot, but it guarantees to keep its audience in one continuous uproar of laughter from the rise of the curtain to the finale.

Coming of the "Russian Lion."

Special to the Herald.

New York, March 11.—Much interest is manifested in sporting circles here in the coming of George Hackenschmidt, the "Russian Lion," who is to arrive here on the Lusitania tomorrow.

The celebrated wrestler will at once begin preparations for his match for the world's championship with Frank Gotch, which is to take place in Chicago early in April. This is the second visit that Hackenschmidt has paid to America. On the occasion of his previous visit here, however, he had not established the reputation which he now enjoys and naturally did not attract nearly so much attention as has been aroused by his coming visit. Prior to his match with Gotch the big wrestler will be seen in exhibition bouts in New York, Philadelphia, Boston and several other cities.
